Eastwood: On The Move

"All the world is a stage," according to William Shakespeare, and all who live in it are merely players. As a play must be kept in motion, moving from scene to scene, the play of life is also kept moving.

Adventurous men have their eyes on the moon, while others are scouring the depths of the oceans. But this is only one scene on life's drama. Great literary discoveries continue to confound scholars, and artisans are crushed by the losses of treasures through the earth's many calamities. Moreover, athletes have long ago broken the four minute mile record along with nearly every record set in previous generations. Some of the greatest statesmen in our nation's history meet the immense task of preserving peace between our land and that great communist nation thousands of miles across the ocean.

However, these achievements are decidedly those of the present adult generation. What of the youth in America?

America's youth, especially those of Eastwood High School, are also on the move. They have great dreams for the future which they intend to make come true. But while yet young and in school where the opportunity for education is nearly unlimited, these youth are getting the background needed to become great, and they are, in their own spheres, making names for themselves. Through academic achievements, organizational development, artistic discovery, and physical discipline, the youth of Eastwood High School are making the initial and important steps in their movement to greatness.

Eastwood Moves Ahead In Education,

Pam Reitzel types intently on a letter in typing class.

The youth of Eastwood are on the move in academics. With some of the best teachers in the country, excellent scientific equipment, fine research sources, and necessary health and physical education facilities, these young men and women are taking giant steps toward the education so vital in the world today.

For the first time in the school's history, class periods were lengthened to permit ten minute supervised study periods, so that pupils could begin their homework under the direction of the teacher who assigned it.

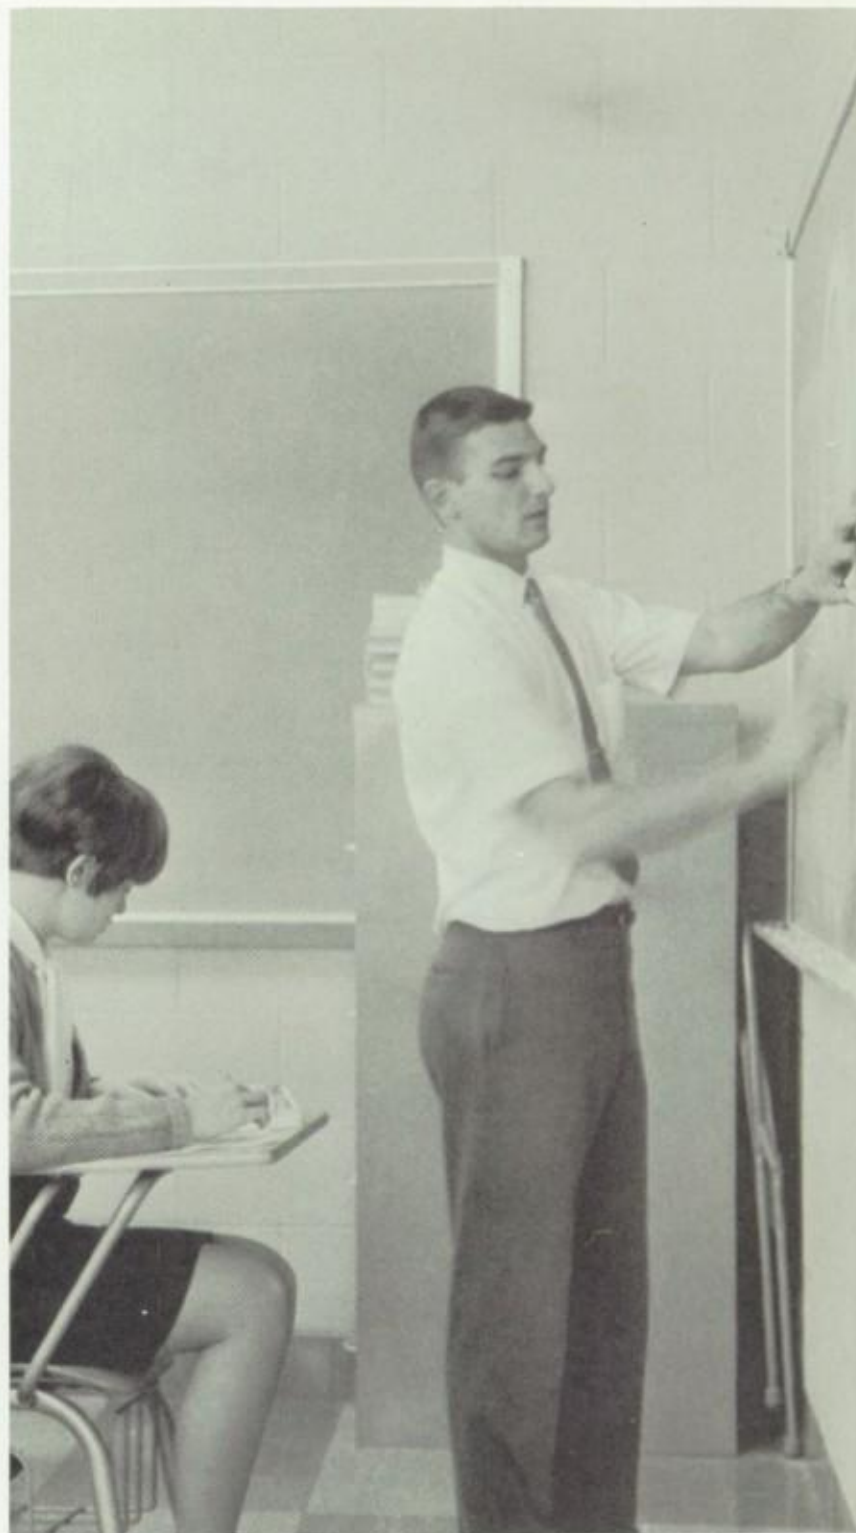

The curriculum was also strengthened by the addition of courses in economics, German, and mathematics seminar.

However, no matter how advanced the curriculum of the school is, little can be accomplished without scholars who are concerned with advancement. In that category, Eastwood leads in determination and perseverance.

Characterized By Leadership, Responsibility

Leadership and acceptance of responsibility toward society are qualifications needed by youth who are on the move toward fulfillment in a future society. These traits are developed, honed, and polished through actual situations as created by varied programs of activities. Through the process of democratic elections, the members of the activities learn the qualities to be aware of in choosing a leader, and the chosen leaders soon learn of the cumbersome burden which comes with responsibility.

However, the ability of leadership alone is not the only trait to be gained from participation in school activities. The ability to work with others, sharing ideas, and collectively attempting to reach a predestined goal is another attribute gained through participation in an organization.

Aside from the social aspects which organizations provide, they also allow the student to develop a special interest which he may have in a given field. Nearly every subject offered in the school's curriculum provides for extra investigation through some form of extracurricular activity.

Kathy Oehmke sings a solo in The King and I.

What ever the pupil's reason for joining an activity he finds within its scope of influence a broadening of his cultural horizons and a psychological change in his relationship with his fellow man. From this basic beginning some may rise to greatness while others will not, yet the values learned from participation in these activities will enable these youth to move ahead with an ever progressing society.

Victory, Defeat,

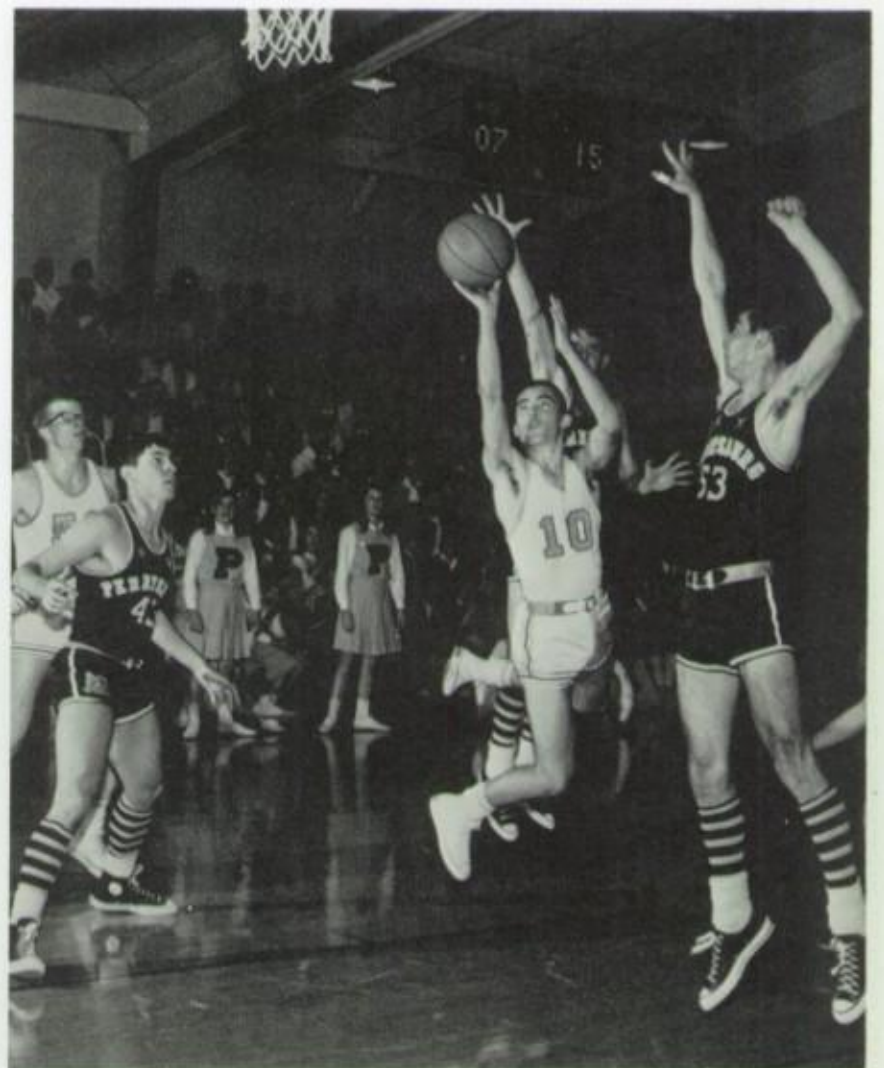

Ted Bowlus aims for a basket.

Everyone can't win all of the time. Someone must lose. But win or lose, one must learn to accept his role in good spirits. This acceptance is the goal of the athletic program of Eastwood High School.

As the pupils of EHS move up in the world, they must learn to take victory or defeat in stride. The ground work for this is laid on the athletic courts, fields, diamonds, and tracks of EHS.

"Let's Make Sportsmanship Our Law." This is the sign that greets one's eye upon entering the Eastwood gymnasium. Summing up the goal of the athletic program, the slogan symbolizes everything the coaches try to instill in the players--on the field of action and off. This spirit, as one could call it, is passed on to the crowd through the pep and vigor of the cheerleaders.

To move up, to succeed in life, one must learn to accept victory or defeat graciously. This is the goal of the athletic department of EHS.

ON THE MOVE IN ACADEMICS

Advanced Math, Science Are Important

Biology pupils explore a new world under the microscope.

Chemistry experimentation calls for the old rule of

"If at first you don't succeed, try, try again."

In Our Space Age

Because of nuclear bombs, Gemini flights, and water pollution, mathematics and science are no longer "just subjects in school;" now they play important roles in man's life, not only in his community, but also world-wide... In realization of these and many more modern advancements, the pupils at Eastwood take advantage of the research made available to them.

The math curriculum at Eastwood is geared to these ever increasing needs of the students. Those not intending to continue their education in college receive instruction in basic math through General Math I and II. Those intending to continue in college Algebra I, II, and III, Trigonometry, and Geometry are offered. Also, a special mathematics seminar is offered for those interested in higher math.

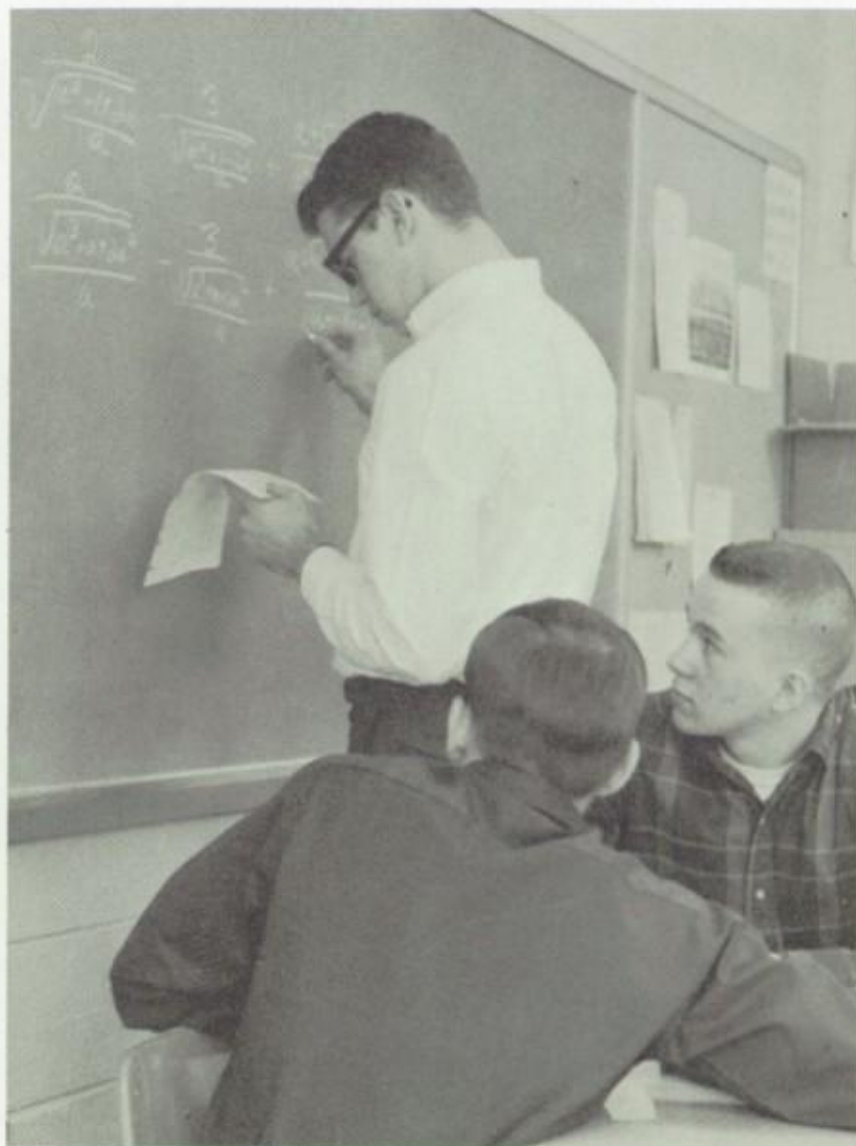

The study of all high school sciences in general, the science of living things, the composition of elements, compounds, and mixtures; and the study of fundamental laws and principles underlying changes in the form or position of matter are the topics encountered in General Science, Biology, Chemistry, Advanced Chemistry, and Physics.

Physics can produce surprising results.

Mr. Stearn explains an algebraic function to puzzled pupils.

Trigonometry has its problems, while confusion reigns.

Spoken, Written Word Are Best Means

Ken Martin defends the status quo in debate.

When one thinks of communications, the first things that comes to one's mind are the spoken and written words. The English and foreign language departments of Eastwood High School combine to give the pupil a firm basis for expressing his ideas and thoughts about the world around him.

Word study, sentence structure, and composition are the steps to better spoken and written English. Intermingled with these steps such works as Return of the Native, Giants in the Earth, and Macbeth are read.

With the addition of German to the curriculum this year, the language department has become four-strong. French, Spanish, and Latin complete the four. These languages not only increase the number of tongues one can speak, but also provide a valuable source of derivatives to help the pupil strengthen his English vocabulary.

The program at EHS is designed to promote a strong, clear knowledge of foreign languages and English which may be the key to a better understanding between peoples.

Carol Mandell gives background on Roman Empires.

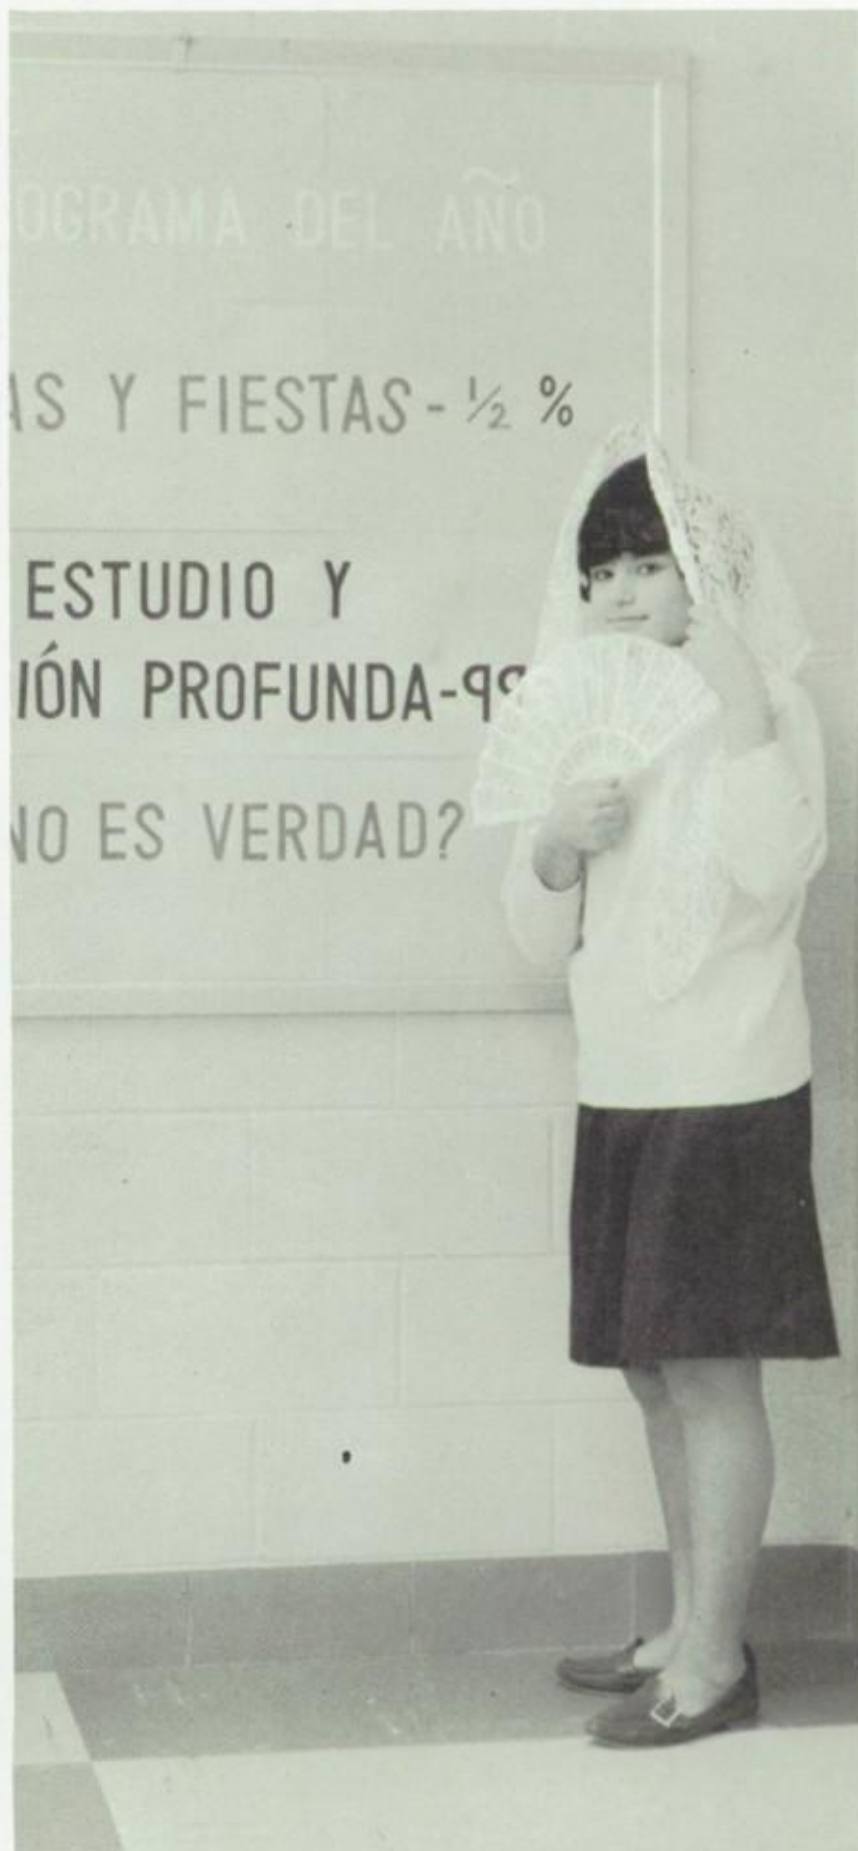

Of World Communication Today

Mrs. Mary Kulhman explains dramatic playwrights.

Senior students ponder test on Lord of the Flies.

Susie Sanchez models Spanish mantilla and fan.

Art, Home Economics Develop Talents

Kathy Zellin and Richard Burns demonstrate molding techniques.

It has been said that "one picture is worth a thousand words," and through Eastwood's extensive art program, pupils are given the opportunity to prove this old cliché.

Throughout the school year, exhibits are held to display the many fields that can be entered in an art career. Weekly exhibits are also on hand for pupils who "lack but love" this artful talent.

In the halls, found mingling with the aroma of oil paints, is the aroma of freshly baked cookies. While walking down the hall, the average student is tempted to run to the nearest entrance to the Home Economics room.

Upon entering, one finds not only cooking, but also, sewing, home planning, and food nutrition, are taught to our future homemakers.

Home Economic girls study color schemes and the design of their clothing.

Business Classes Emphasize Skill, Accuracy

Typing II class expands knowledge of typing pupils.

RIGHT: Shorthand I pupils build dictation speed.

Business, a major world occupation and profession is one of the fields of study at Eastwood. Typing, Shorthand, Bookkeeping, and Journalism keep students engaged in learning and performing a few of the many tasks required for a complete business background.

Languages in themselves, Shorthand and Notehand include signs and symbols representative for words and phrases which are unrecognizable by students who are not enrolled in its time consuming study.

Typing, on the other hand, demands the exercise of many fingers, accompanied by a comparable thinking speed.

Added to these other courses of study, Bookkeeping and Journalism each contribute from their fields of educational interest. Bookkeeping with its many records consisting of almost innumerable figures, and Journalism with its study of news stories and newspaper writing techniques help to complete the total Eastwood business department.

Archery, Volleyball On Physical Education Agenda

This is hard work!"

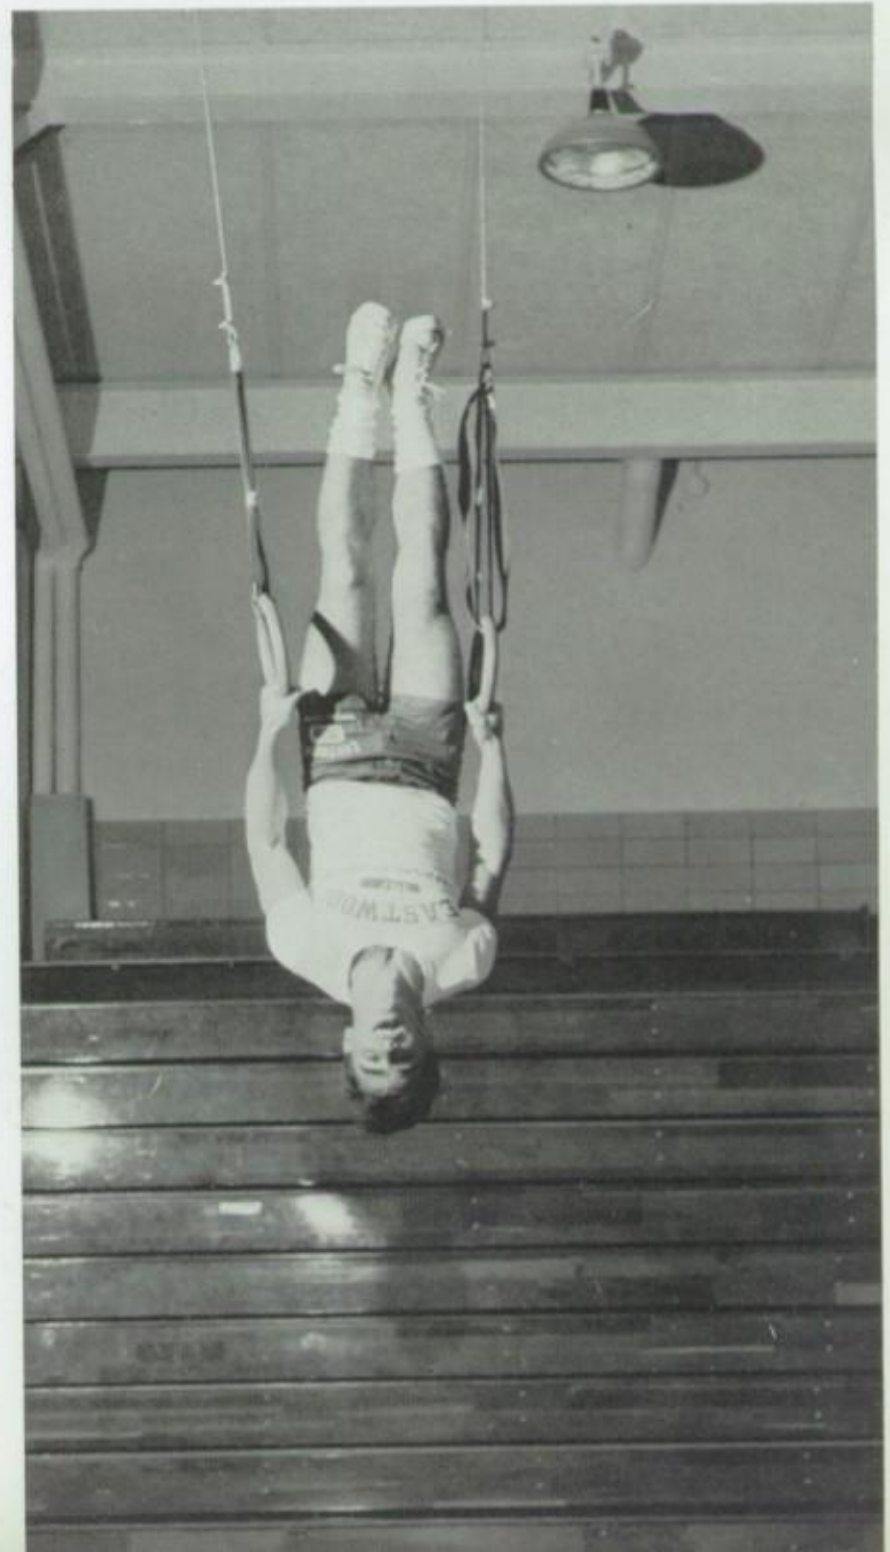

RIGHT: Physical Education has its ups and downs.

Nearly everyone knows that to have a healthy mind, a healthy body is needed.

To meet these requirements, the Health and Physical Education Departments of Eastwood have advocated and initiated a vigorous health education and physical fitness program.

Through such games as volleyball, basketball, soccer, football, and hockey, the youths learn to appreciate the benefits of healthy competition. Bodies are under greater physical discipline when classes endeavor tumbling.

As a result of the health program, pupils not only learn what a body should be like physically, but also what should go into that body. They also become familiar with and practice the rules of good health care.

Concerts, Contests Highlight Music Department

The Eastwood High School Band performs for the spectators during the half time.

Although the music department is made up of two subdivisions: vocal and instrumental music, the departments work closely to produce some of the most impressive music in the community.

With football games, the musical, the annual Christmas Concert, the 'Pops' Concert, and the county-wide music contest in the spring, quite an air of enthusiasm is spread over the high school by the members of the band and choruses of Eastwood High School.

In addition, the drill team and majorettes add other touches to final precision for the "Eagle Entertainment Department."

Highlighting the musical season this year, was the trip the marching band took to Detroit to play for the Detroit Lions.

Mr. Deerwester gives the countdown, launching the chorus into a musical escapade.

Funny business reigns in the practice room when Rick Hagg is present.

Social Studies Promotes World Understanding

In family living, Connie Caudill and Ken Kruke-meyer study colors for interior decoration.

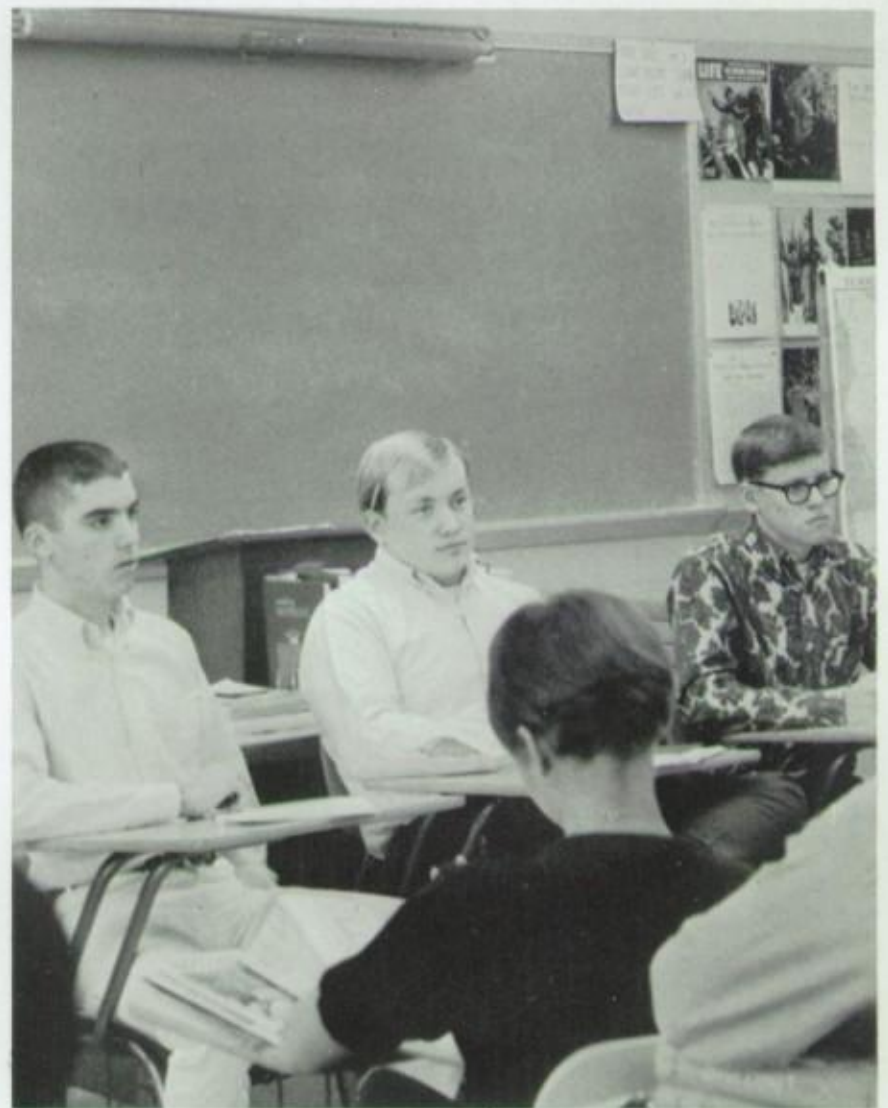

Mr. Calvin Freund, government teacher, points out some principles of American government.

In this world of politics, social studies plays an ever-increasing role in one's life. At Eastwood High School, ancient history, sociology, family living, economics, American history, and American Government serve to increase the the pupil's knowledge about the world in which he lives.

Through American history, American government, and economics, the pupil gains a working knowledge of his country's background and the intricate functioning of its government.

The tracing of the development of civilization from the age of the cave man to present day occupies the time and attention of the ancient history classes.

Sociology and family living combine to help the pupil prepare for the responsibility of adulthood.

A panel on human relations is part of Sociology class.

A Humanities Course was initiated at Eastwood High School in 1965 in co-operation with the Wood County School System and BGSU. University faculty members present lectures on Monday morning in the areas of art, music, philosophy, English, and history as the relate to the Age of Reason, the 18th century.

On Friday, discussions are held. A primary aim of the course is to correlate the areas of culture that foster humanism as it was born in the Age of Reason, and has influenced our present thought.

Mrs. Cletus Sheffler is the coordinator, and she is assisted by teachers who are specialists in the various areas.

Humanities pupils take notes during one of the panel discussions.

Shop, Vo-Ag Develop Vocational Interests

During the day, if one were to walk past the cafeteria, one would hear the sounds of saws, drills, and tractors coming from the other side of the halls. These sounds are a part of the industrial arts and vocational agriculture departments of Eastwood High School.

In industrial arts, projects such as gun racks, cedar chests, and chairs occupy the time of the pupils. These projects are displayed in the case across from the cafeteria and make a handsome exhibit.

Vocational agriculture pupils participate in such projects as crop raising, stock raising, and the studying of better general farming methods. Often one may see the hybrid ears of corn on display at different times. The climax of the vocational agriculture program is achieved when several members are selected to attend the national convention.

Being able to repair a tractor may come in handy someday for these future farmers and vocational agriculture pupils.

Two freshmen find their talent in chest making during an industrial arts class.

Penta County Enrolls Many More EHS Pupils

In 1965 a new vocational school was opened to Eastwood High School juniors and seniors as well as students from the surrounding five counties. This school--Penta County--has offered vast amounts of specialized training in the fields of agriculture, home economics, business education, distributive education, and trades and industry. Qualified applicants are determined by an aptitude test administered at Penta County on a day designated as open house.

Seventy-one Eastwood students enrolled in Penta-County keep in contact with friends at Eastwood by participating in extra curricular activities, attending athletic contests, and sponsoring dances open to everyone.

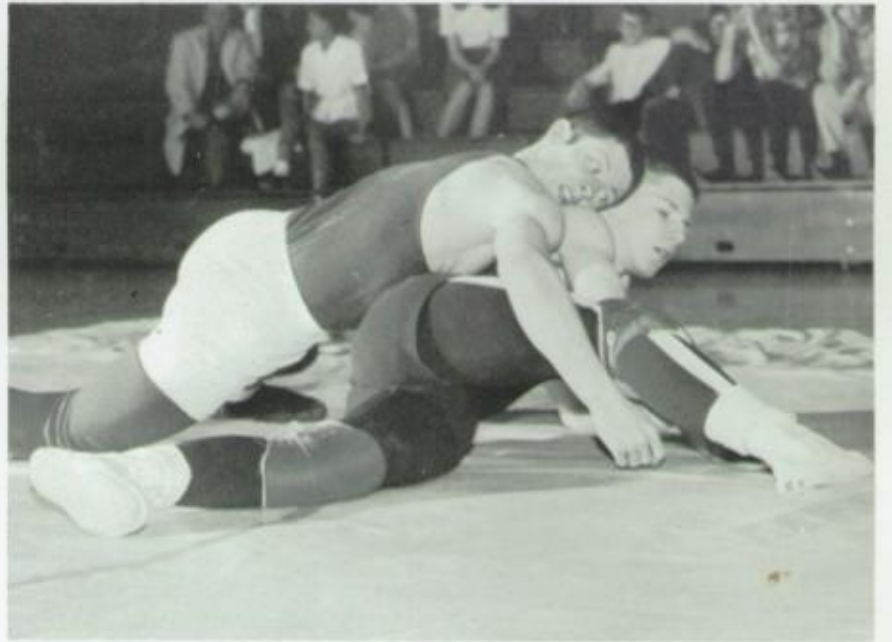

Pam Moore and Marlene Miller work with one of the many instruments they must work with in studying to be a dental technician.

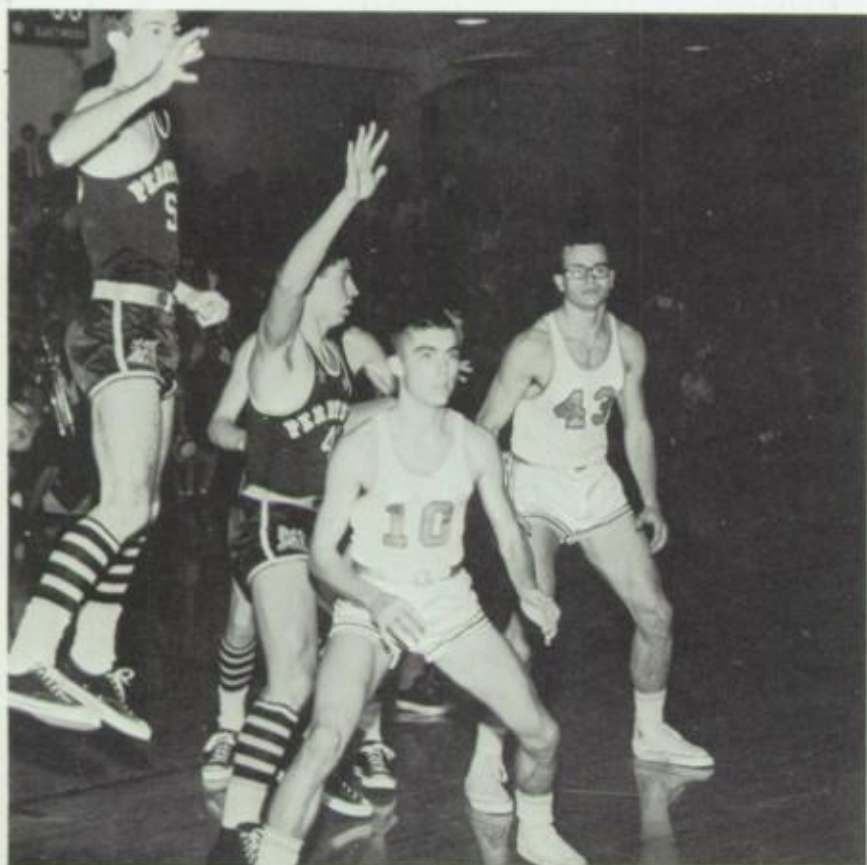

The car is a complicated machine, as David Feasel and Mike Bihn find out.

The Annual Staff with its many members spend at least one night a week working on lasting memories of academic experiences and extracurricular activities reflected in a traditional Aquila.

An array of pictures with descriptive paragraphs typify the annual with its many new freshman faces and familiar faces of graduation seniors. Color intermingled throughout the book for the first time, catches the reader's eye, enabling him to relive past events in their original splendor.

With the delivery of the books in the spring, the efforts of the previous months have been realized.

Dorene Fredrich, Marlene Restemeyer, and Jane Busdeker select pictures.

Newspaper Staff Works Toward Another Trophy

FIRST ROW: Jane Busdeker, Cheryl Hatas, Mike Parrish, Connie Caudill, Mary Musson. SECOND

The recently popular cliché, "where the action is", can aptly be used to describe Eastwood's journalism room. Something is always happening there. If staff members are not writing stories, setting up pages, or printing papers, they are inevitably deeply involved in discussions on all types of subjects.

Despite the fact that the Eagle's Eye is printed in Room 13, the semimonthly publication has been rated superior by the Northwestern Ohio Journalism Association.

The paper is written, laid out, and printed by the eight Journalism II pupils, and it is assembled with the aid of study hall pupils. As advisor, Mrs. Sue Clausen proofreads the pages and suggests improvements.

Jane Busdeker reviews the latest edition of the Eagle's Eye.

The busy activity schedule of Eastwood's student governing body, the Student Council, is placed in the hands of trustworthy, capable individuals who act as one voice for the entire student body.

Their leadership is reflected throughout the year as they sponsor such events as the Homecoming, Pep Week, Christmas and Spring dances, and a dance for the Wood County Area Student Council members. Their constructive leadership is also applied to serious endeavors such as a penny pitch for the March of Dimes at a basketball game and a Teen Queen for the Crippled Children's Association.

This hard working organization meets twice a month on Fridays.

The Varsity cheerleaders put a tiger in the eagles tank (cage) for a homecoming victory.

The Senior Literary Society offers its members opportunities to broaden their knowledge in the fields of art, especially literature as designated by the name. It is the only school organization which continues through the summer when they meet every two weeks.

During the summer of 1966, the plays Oedipus Rex by Sophocles, A Doll's House by Ibsen, Faust by Van Goethe, and Cyrano de Bergerac by Rostrand, along with the books Crime and Punishment by Dostoevsky and Lost Horizon by Hilton were discussed by the members under the guidance of Mrs. Kuhlman. Meetings are held once a month during the school year. At one of these meetings, the members learned how to interpret modern art and listened to recorded plays.

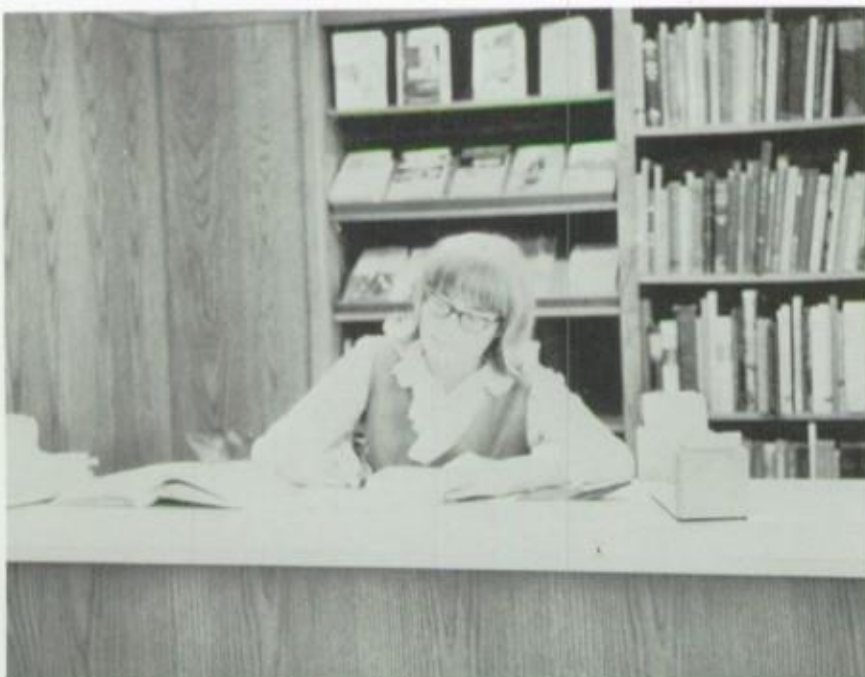

Seniors enjoy an evening at Mrs. Kuhlman's home.

These girls are here to assist the pupils in finding the right books, and to check the books in and out.

To be a librarian, these girls give up a study hall, and they work in the library.

The eleven girls also help Mrs. Cornell catalogue the many new books the library has gotten. To accommodate these new books, an extra book shelf has been added to the library.

The function of the club is to give these pupils a better background of the ancient Roman civilization and its language. The club also tends to develop an extracurricular interest on the subject.

Some of the organization's activity highlights are a field trip to the Toledo Art Museum to observe the display on the ancient Romans, a banquet--Roman style, a Christmas party, and the initiation of new members.

Mrs. Cletus Seeffler is the other advisor. She was not present at the time the picture was taken.

Throughout the year, in addition to regular business meetings, the members enjoy programs dealing with various phases of education, such as teaching, special education, and discipline. To inform the student body of such observances as National Education Week and Teaching Career Month, posters are affixed reminders of the club's activities.

This year there were two objectives for the club to achieve. The first was to help each of the members to increase her abilities and strive for their full development. And secondly, they were to participate actively in projects for family, community, and worldly improvement.

On the recreational side, the club had a Halloween Party, Christmas Party, and a "Girls' Night Out".

When they aren't busy with this big task, they relax and enjoy stretching their imaginations with such things as fingerpainting and unusual sculpture.

This October the Merry Messers entertained themselves with a Halloween party for a change of pace.

Whether they're building sets, painting with their fingers, or having parties, the Merry Messers add fun to their artistic talents to give a sum total of excitement.

Marching Seasons

Students interested in an extensive and perpetually active instrumental music program find all the could wish for at Eastwood High School.

After finishing a summer of parades, mass band at Cedar Point, the band started a full scheduled year of activities. Heading the list was an all precision football season, playing for the opening of the new Doyt L. Perry Stadium at Bowling Green State University, and pre-game and half-time performances at Tiger Stadium in Detroit, and also at Defiance College.

With marching season completed, auditions were held for positions and a concert band was selected. Concert band devotes most of its time to preparing for contest, but it also performs at a Pops Concert in the spring, an evening concert, and an occasional exchange tour to another high school.

Along with concert band, music pupils find themselves participating in such activities as all-county band, solo and ensemble contest, pep band, and dance band.

Rick Hagg, Barbara Drewes, and Lois Aufdencamp assemble their horns in preparation for band the last period of the day.

The Pep Band, which performs at all home basketball games, is whipped into a version of the song "Mame."

The EHS marching band performs the traditional formation of an "E" at most football games.

Oriental Musical,

A smash hit, The King and I, was presented by the pupils of the Eastwood School District under the direction of Mark Deerwester and Lawrence McCormic on November 18, 19, and 20.

The auditorium was filled the first two nights, and after the news of the musical's success had spread, it was filled to an overflow for the Sunday performance.

Susan Meyers, as Anna, and David Evans, as the King, played the leading roles in the musical version of Anna and the King of Siam. The supporting roles were filled by Susan Schellhase, as Lady Thiang, Kathy Oehmke, as Tuptim, and Jim Witter, as Lun Tha.

As the curtain rose, Anna and her son were newly arrived in the small country of Siam. Here, Anna taught the royal children. During the course of her stay, she was surprised by the servility of the subjects in the presence of their king and by the indignities she felt were dealt her by the King. In the second act we experience tears of happiness during the ball scenes and tears of sorrow over the King's death as the curtain falls.

The wives express their views on Anna's appearance in "Western People are Funny."

The King checks the schoolroom to see the progress of his wives and children.

The King is in a "Puzzlement" over his duties.

Pep Of Numerous Girls

A fast moving game of basketball is one of the GAA's many activities.

The boisterous laughter of energetic girls can be heard every Monday afternoon, as the GAA participates in its athletic activities. These activities consist of volleyball and basketball, softball, hockey, and badminton. The traveling volleyball and basketball teams are also a part of GAA. These girls are chosen by the club advisor and they compete with various area schools.

Some of the primary events of the year include the initiation of new members, the Spring formal dance, which is second only to the prom in the social life of the school, and the party for honoring the departing seniors.

From these activities, the girls develop lasting friendships, rewarding goals in leadership, and learn the laws of good sportsmanship.

Ken Michelsen lead the TD's in scoring with 30 points, while Roger Hanson scored 18 and Scott Haas tallied 16.

The Freshmen footballers under the direction of Coaches Gary Bierly and Keith Neiderkahr posted a 1-4 record. Jesse Enriquez lead the Freshmen in scoring with 18 points while Phil Donaldson scored 10 points.

Although the freshmen's record did not equal the reserves, both teams gained valuable experience needed to keep the NLL title at EHS.

1966 Football Homecoming

The 1966 Football Homecoming was a two-fold success. Not only did Eastwood have an enthusiastic and lovely queen and court, but the team laid a glorious victory at the feet of their exuberant queen.

The October seventh homecoming game was preceded by the entrance of the court in convertibles, followed by Queen Susan Schellhase on a pink and burgundy float.

The tri-captains presented Queen Sue with a bouquet of roses, the traditional pendant, and a kiss.

The game and halftime show were in Queen Sue's honor with the team winning a decisive victory of 28-12 over Anthony Wayne. Finally, the festive event ended with a dance the next evening.

If you were to ask Queen Sue if she felt the 1966 Homecoming was a fabulous event, she would most certainly answer with an emphatic, "You bet your booties Granny!"

First Undefeated Season In History Of The

In the first week of November, Eagle fans turned from a NLL gridiron championship, to hope and speculation for the basketball team. Coach Dale Bruning and his charges did not waste much time in proving that the Eastwood Cagers were indeed going places, beating Genoa 78-54, Clay 69-41, Perrysburg 88-48, and for the first time in EHS history going over the century mark by beating Springfield 109-64. The Eagles sped through the season downing foe after foe, clinching the Northern Lakes League title with an 89-43 win over Elmwood. Beating Lake 53-45 the Eagle five became the first Eastwood team to reach an 18-0 record.

Statistics show why the Eagles were so successful. In 18 games the Eagles scored 1372 points for a 76.2 average, while their opponents tallied only 896 for a 49.8 point average. Co-Captain Jim Mandell, who was fourth in County and League scoring hit 340 points for a 18.9 point average, while Mike Gardner averaged 15.4 and Co-Captain Bob Wilson cashed in with 14.4. Sophomore Ken Hamen grabbed 191 rebounds, Bob Wilson was a close second with 183 and Ted Bowlus accounted for 153. Bowlus averaged 8.8 points a game as Hamen connected for 7.3.

Eastwood's Rob Wilson and Perrysburg's Jack Simmons vie for the opening jump ball in the Perrysburg-Eastwood league game.

Eagles Honor Queen

The 1967 Basketball Homecoming Queen, Pat Brinker

Jim Mandell proves why the Eagles are the best.

Pat Brinker, a brown-eyed brunette, was crowned queen of the 1966-1967 basketball season during a dramatic ceremony which included the blaze of spotlights, the thunder of applause, the chill of suspense, and the romance of soft music.

One girl from each class was chosen as an attendant and the seniors chose two girls leaving the selection of the queen to the basketball team.

Finally, at the game that weekend, the 1966-1967 queen was crowned by Shirley Baumen the 1965-1966 queen. The team honored their new queen with a rousing victory against Metamora High School with a score of 96-46.

The festivities were then concluded with a dance held in the queen's honor.

To the seniors of EHS, this year marks more than an end to another school year's activity. For them 1967 is a year marking a sad ending to one part of their lives and an exciting beginning to another.

Looking back on their four years of high school, many things come to mind. They can remember the strangeness and slightly bewildered feeling of freshman. Then they were seasoned sophomores, and they too could laugh at the green freshmen and help dream up new stunts to vex them at club initiations. As juniors, the prom was their responsibility. Their efforts were united and the prom which resulted was "Moonlight Over The Alps."

Then they were seniors and they found themselves in positions of responsibility as club officers, staff editor, and team captains. Life was becoming more complicated as the seniors were forced to think about what would come after high school, and if they had prepared themselves for it. The class motto which states that "The greatest thing in the world is not so much where we are, but in what direction we are moving."

Along with choosing the motto, the class chose the colors emerald green and gold as its colors, and a white carnation edged in green as its flower.

As the year drew to a close, all too quickly the seniors realized that the years at Eastwood had meant more than an education. Perhaps the words of the alma mater express the true feeling best when it says "A loyalty forever; a friendship long and true. These thoughts will be our memories as we the years review. This pledge we make together though be fleeting by. May we inspire lasting faith in all that is Eastwood High."

ON THE MOVE IN ELEMENTARY

Elementary Schools Form Basis For A Child's Life

Many times when people think of the Eastwood School District, they think only of the high school and its related activities. However, more integral than the high school are five elementary schools in the district.

It is in these five elementary schools that the basis for a child's whole life is laid. Here he learns to share with others, express himself, and form study habits. These things will be a part of him as long as he lives.

The world of an elementary pupil is an extremely active one. The activity begins with the bus ride in the morning, continues through recesses, lunches, classes, and ends with the homeward ride. Intermingled are the little indescribable incidents such as the time Johnny went to get a drink, the fountain stuck, and he burst into tears because he thought he had broken it. Or what about the time when every elementary pupil looks innocently into the face of his teacher and asks "Why?"

This is elementary life in a nutshell. While there are many things that go on that can not be captured by the pen, the following pages have tried to do it with a camera. This is the Eastwood Elementary.

An active basketball game is part of recess at Webster.

"I'm eating. I don't know about you."

Students concentrate on perspective in art class.

As Business Manager of this yearbook I wish to thank the advertising patrons of this book for their cooperation. For those students reading this page I ask that you give these businessmen the patronage that they have given you and your school. One again I say thank you.

Michael A. Phillips
Business Manager

Acknowledgments

Dear Subscriber:

At the beginning of the year, the staff was selected. During the year they worked diligently to make the 1967 Aquila the best yearbook in the history of Eastwood. While they contributed their time and energies, so did many other people.

I would like to extend special thanks to the administration of our school, for they have helped make several important decisions. The cooperation of the teachers is also greatly appreciated. This book could not be printed without acknowledging the two people who had as much to do with this book as many people on the staff. These two people are the high school janitors, Mr. Brown, and Mr. Beeker. Many times they kept the school open late after school and opened it early Saturday mornings so that we might work. Although these few lines do not seem adequate, I especially thank these two people.

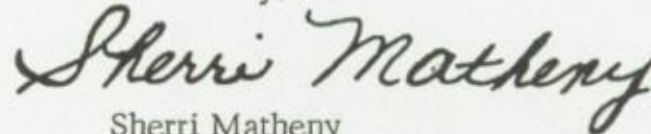

To publish a yearbook, one must have two special advisors. The first is the staff advisor, Mrs. June Davis. She has been a great aid in helping us with all the problems involved in assembling the book. Many times she has stayed late after school just to help us. The second advisor is a person whom few people outside the staff ever met. He is the Taylor yearbook counselor, Mr. Dick Swiech. Mr. Swiech has given invaluable advice to us in any area in which we have been troubled, and has helped us out of trouble more than once. I wish to thank him for his extreme patience.

While it may seem out of place, here I would like to interject and extend a thank-you to the staff of the 1967 Aquila. My staff this year has been a very excellent one, and as time passes each succeeding yearbook should be better than the last.

Finally, there is one person whom I have failed to thank, and that is you, the subscriber. Without you this book could not be printed. We of the Aquila staff feel that this book belongs not only to the school, but also to the community.

As I conclude this letter, I again wish to thank all those I have previously mentioned. Lastly, I wish good luck to the staff of the 1968 Aquila. May you have the pleasant memories that I have.

Yours truly,

Sherri Matheny

Five seniors were named to the Principal's List out of the graduating Class of '65. They were June Heckman, Linda Hetrick, David Dennis, Linda Gallier, and Steven Marks. These five qualified by having maintained a 3.5 (A-) average through their entire high school career.

Qualifications for National Honor Society were met by sixteen students this year. A point average of 3.25 (B+) and a specified number of service points is required of each member. Twelve accumulative activity points are demanded of sophomores, sixteen of juniors, and twenty-five of seniors. Sophomores are accepted as probationary members, while juniors and seniors enjoy full membership and the privilege of attending the Wood County Honor Society banquet. These make National Honor Society perhaps the most exclusive organization at E.H.S.

Fifty-one students received various honors and awards at the annual Scholastic Banquet on May 4. Awards given included Honor Society, I.Q. League, Americanism and Government, Betty Crocker, and Senior Honor Roll Awards. "I Dare You" awards went to seniors Steven Marks and June Heckman. Arlyn Brinker and Margaret Hiser received Citizenship honors. Scholarships and several other presentations were announced.

Mr. Dale Bruning, Eastwood faculty member, acted as toastmaster for the evening. The guest speaker was Trevor J. Phillips, an instructor in the Education Department of Bowling Green State University.

The entire program was sponsored by the Kiwanis and Civic Clubs in the Eastwood District.

The 1965 Athletic Awards Banquet was held in the High School cafeteria on April 6. After the dinner, served by the band boosters, the program was officiated by Pastor Norman Schellhase of the Bethlehem Lutheran Church. Shirley Bauman, Nancy Amos, and the Senior Girls Ensemble #2 provided instrumental and vocal entertainment.

Instead of having a speaker, the coaches presented the awards to the athletes; and representatives of last year's and next year's football, basketball, and wrestling teams gave short dissertations.

Pastor Norman Schellhase acted as toastmaster.

Coach Wayne Ambrose gives recognition to the football team who had received their awards earlier.

Future Farmers Honored At Banquet

Mr. Ben Saunders, FFA adviser, presents a bouquet of roses to Cindi Bowen, FFA Sweetheart.

Oriental Theme Highlights

D. Walston and date pause at the refreshment table.

G. Lohrbach offers a helping hand to date.

May 15 was a big day for many high school students' lives. "Sayonara" being the theme of the junior-senior prom, the juniors bid the seniors farewell.

Arriving at the prom with their dates, the students entered a beautifully decorated gymnasium. At the end of the dance floor a fifty-five foot dragon was standing, looking on as the people danced to the music of the "Dee Cees" stage band. An oriental garden at the side of the gymnasium attracted many an eye.

Following the reading of the class will by Steven Marks, senior class president, and the class prophecy by Duane Gross, junior, a buffet was served by the mothers of the junior class. After partaking of the buffet, many people returned to the dance floor.

At one-thirty in the morning, the gymnasium emptied as most left for Lehmann's Lodge near Fostoria. Here they enjoyed such activities as swimming, dancing, miniature golf, and other types of recreation. Students could also pass the evening by bowling at nearby Seneca Lanes.

Returning to the school at four-thirty, they enjoyed a breakfast served by the junior mothers. After eating, everyone headed toward home, storing the prom in their memories as a lasting treasure.

"Sound Of Music" Rated Excellent

Von Trapp children eagerly prepare to sing along with Maria as she teaches them the delightful "Do-Re-Mi."

Max commences "Somersaulting at a Cockeyed Angle."

Rogers' and Hammerstein's "The Sound of Music" was presented on March 7, 8, and 9. This musical was produced by the music department, under the direction of Mr. Lawrence McCormic and Mr. Mark Deerwester.

Nearly eighty students comprised the cast. Sarah Witker portrayed the role of Maria; Dennis Walston, the part of Captain von Trapp. Other lead roles were played by Robert Bomlitz as Max, Sue Bockbrader as Elsa, and Fareal Brinker as Mother Superior. A unique addition to the musical was a number of younger children who handled the parts of the adorable von Trapp children. Other minor characters also performed admirably in their parts.

The musical accompaniment was supplied by a special orchestra of music students and several other musicians.

The plot centered primarily around the life of Maria. Maria's love for music raises some complaints in the abbey. She takes a leave of absence from the abbey, meets the von Trapps, and falls in love with the Captain. Political implications affect the family as the Nazis move into Austria, their homeland. The story ends happily as Maria, Captain, and children flee to safety.

Capacity crowds attested to the excellent story, music, and performances involved in the play.

Seventh Annual Commencement Held

Donned in caps and gowns, graduating seniors make final appearance as a class as they prepare to receive diplomas.

Baccalaureate and commencement ceremonies were held on Sunday, May 23, 1965, for the graduating Class of '65. One hundred six seniors, the largest class in the history of Eastwood, received their diplomas. The class wore white caps and gowns, burgundy and white tassels, and burgundy tipped carnations.

Senior president Steven Marks extended the welcome address at commencement. Dallas Gardner, executive head, introduced Dr. John E. Exner of the Psychology Department of Bowling Green State University, who delivered the commencement address. Mr. Norman Hamen, president of the Board of Education, presented the diplomas to the seniors.

Congratulations were extended following the recessional as the seniors formed a receiving line.

I.Q. League Faces Stiff Competition

FIRST ROW: S. Marks, W. Bockbrader, Mr. Lowrie, M. Westerhaus, M. Gardner. SECOND ROW: J. Heckman, L. Busdeker, J. Busdeker, D. Huprich.

Eastwood's I.Q. Team, composed this year of four male scholars, played five interscholastic games over radio and television station WFOB. Their final record was 3-2 in a league comprising somewhat more rigid competition. The I.Q. League, consisting of thirteen county and area schools, affords an opportunity for students to increase and exhibit their knowledge in various subjects including science, English, current events, history, and government.

Office Assistants Prove Invaluable

Ten girls serve as office assistants to Mrs. Milda Sanders, high school secretary, and to the other office staff. At least one girl is busy in the office each period of the school day. Their tasks include typing stencils; recording absences and grades; counting cafeteria money; mimeographing weekly bulletins, menus, and tests; and performing various other secretarial duties. Distributing announcements to various rooms and locating teachers and students throughout the building also occupies much of their time.

Principal Richard Lowrie selects these girls during spring registration and asks them to serve. The only desired requirement is that they be able to type.

N. Dean types copy of weekly bulletin.

Roman Banquet and G.A.A. Formal

"When in Rome, do as the Romans do!" seemed to be the theme of the Latin Club banquet.

Forty members and five guests attended Eastwood's first Latin Club Banquet on April 28. The affair was held in the school cafeteria, which had been transformed into a festive Roman banquet hall.

Garbed in Roman attire and reclining at lowered tables decorated with laurel and burning tapers, the SPQR presented an authentic enactment of a typical Roman dinner party.

After the guests were seated at the tables, six slaves removed the guests' sandals and hung garlands around their necks. Throughout the meal, the slaves served food, passed the finger bowls after each course, wiped off the tables, and distributed gifts.

Between the courses an ensemble under the direction of Karen Hasel sang "America Pulchra" or "America the Beautiful." Following the second course Mark Schulte, who served as master of ceremonies, offered a sacrifice to the Lares and Penates, who are Roman gods of the home. To conclude the festivities a mock trial written by Sherri Matheny and a skit were presented.

Comprise Memorable Spring Activities

"Plantation Paradise" Theme of G.A.A. Formal

It looks like everyone's having fun.

The theme of the annual G.A.A. dance was "Plantation Paradise." This theme was carried out in creating a romantic setting of an old southern plantation. The plantation with its majestic columns helped develop the romantic atmosphere which filled the gymnasium. There was also a bandstand with a canopy which displayed "The Three J's" of Perrysburg who provided entertainment and dance music for the evening. A refreshment patio was set up in the hall.

The climax of the evening came when the G.A.A. girls and their dates formed a path for the announcement of the king. The G.A.A. president, Linda Hetrick, broke the tension by proclaiming Bill Caughey, senior, as king. Terry Holcomb and Dwight Wilson, both seniors, were also named to the royal court.

Final Assembly Highlighted By Presentations

Mr. Welniak presents a yearbook award to R. Bomlitz.

Final awards presentations were made at an assembly on May 13. Varsity and reserve letters were presented to baseball players and G.A.A. members. Chorus and ensemble pins, band awards, and debate trophies were given to a number of students. District scholarship certificates were awarded for places in the local tests. Student council and Aquila staff pins were also awarded.

The 1965 edition of the Aquila was revealed for the first time and was distributed to the student body. Seniors also received their class composites.

Since it was the last assembly for the seniors, the class made a grand entry as they marched in to the beat of a drum cadence. Underclassmen honored them by standing while the class paraded into the auditorium.
